It is rumored in Vienna that Charles already has entered Budapest, a news agency dispatch reports.
At the meeting of the council of ambassadors the influence of the allied powers was definitely thrown against the attempted restoration.
The council instructed the allied representatives in Budapest immediately to demand from the Hungarian government these things:
1. A proclamation of the forfeiture of all rights of ex-King Charles to the throne.
2. The placing of Charles under arrest and his expulsion from Hungary, which the allied powers will fix.
Failing these things, the allied representatives are instructed to inform the Hungarian government that the allied powers will decline all responsibility and the consequences which might result for Hungary.
